1. Background and Objectives

Background and Objectives

From December 2025 to January 2026, The Philanthropic Initiative (TPI) conducted a research project co-sponsored by DAFgiving360™ and Foundation Source, with additional support from the Boston Foundation. This research builds on prior iterations conducted in 2013 and 2018 and provides valuable information for professional advisors (“advisors”) and their clients, donors, nonprofit professionals, and others interested in philanthropy and the nonprofit sector.

The current study revisits and expands upon key themes from past versions from the perspective of both professional advisors and high-net-worth (“HNW”) clients engaged in philanthropy, including:

- An understanding of the extent and dynamics of philanthropic conversations between advisors and their HNW clients.
- A measure of the importance of the philanthropic conversation to advisors and HNW clients.
- An assessment of advisors’ and HNW clients’ respective roles in and responsibility for conducting the philanthropic conversation.
- An exploration of the tendencies of advisors and experiences of HNW clients with respect to the content of the philanthropic conversation.
- A comparison of advisors’ perceptions of HNW clients’ motivations and hesitations to engage in philanthropy with reasons provided by clients.
- An assessment of advisors’ knowledge, expertise, and ability to provide philanthropic guidance to their clients.
- A confirmation that discussing philanthropy with clients increases advisors’ business in a variety of ways.

The comprehensive data presented and analyzed was gathered from two surveys. The first survey was conducted among a broad, random, national sample of financial/wealth advisors (not company/firm specific), trust and estate attorneys, and tax advisors/accountants who advise HNW clients. The second survey was conducted among HNW clients with $5 million or more in investable assets and who are actively engaged in charitable giving or philanthropy. A total of 300 professional advisors and 103 HNW clients met the respective criteria and completed the surveys.

2. Methodology

Methodology

The Questionnaires

To meet the objectives of the project, from December 2025 to January 2026 a comprehensive, quantitative online survey was conducted among a broad, random sample of 300 professional advisors (not company/firm specific) who advise high-net-worth (“HNW”) clients (those with $5 million or more in investable assets). A total of 61 questions were asked on a variety of topics including philanthropic discussions with HNW clients, the impact of philanthropic advising on business development, and professional advisors’ own personal charitable giving.

Simultaneously, an online survey was conducted among 103 HNW clients who participate in philanthropic activities. A total of 67 questions were asked on a variety of topics including patterns of giving, philanthropic discussions with professional advisors, and knowledge and use of direct giving vehicles.

The Sample Composition

Professional advisor respondents were screened to ensure that they fall into one of the desired advisor categories (financial/wealth, trust/estate attorney, tax/accountant) and that they advise HNW clients. HNW client respondents were screened to ensure that they have $5 million or more in investable assets and are actively engaged in charitable giving or philanthropy (which could include financial donations or volunteering). For the remainder of the report, the three advisor group respondents will be referred to as ‘Professional Advisors’ when referred to as a whole group and HNW client respondents will be referred to as ‘Clients’.

Professional Advisors				HNW Clients
Total	Wealth Advisors	Trust / Estate Attorneys	Accountant / Tax Advisors
300	100	100	100	103

Note: The color schemes in this table are used throughout the report to designate the two different sample groups: professional advisors and HNW clients.

Methodology

Statistical Significance

Statistical significance is a term used to describe results that are unlikely to have occurred by chance. Significance is a statistical term that tells how sure one is that a difference or relationship exists between measures.

Measures for the types of professional advisors (financial/wealth, trust/estate attorneys, and tax advisors/accountants) have been statistically tested for differences between the groups. All data have been tested for statistical significance at the 95% confidence level. Any significant differences between segments are noted throughout the report with letters (a, b, c, etc.) when a measure is statistically larger than the indicated measure. Any significance from the most recent study to the previous study (2025 to 2018) is noted throughout the report with small green or red arrows where applicable.

2025 scores are significantly higher than those of previous study (2018)

3. Executive Summary

Discussing Philanthropy: Whose Job Is It Anyway?

In a marked increase from prior years, nearly all professional advisors (“advisors”) (99%) now believe it is important to discuss philanthropy with their high-net-worth (“HNW”) clients and 96% view it as their obligation to do so.

HNW clients agree with 88% reporting that philanthropic conversations are important and 80% believing advisors have a responsibility to discuss charitable giving.

However, fewer than half (45%) of advisors report discussing philanthropy with most of their HNW clients.

↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

The Philanthropic Conversation: Look Who's Talking

Clients now report discussing philanthropy with professional advisors (88%, up from 67% in 2018) more than anyone else, including spouses or partners (83%).

However, clients say the most valuable philanthropic guidance comes first from their spouse or partner (28%), then from philanthropic advisors (23%), and then from professional advisors (18%).

Advisors and clients differ on who initiates the philanthropic conversation. Two-thirds (67%) of advisors say they typically raise the topic while 40% of clients say that they do, and 52% of clients say it is raised equally.

The majority (68%) of advisors and clients (56%) agree that the best time to introduce philanthropy is after the first few meetings. Advisors also report raising the topic after gaining detailed knowledge of a client’s financial picture (50%) slightly ahead of their personal lives (46%).

Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

More Balanced Conversations: Deepening the Discussion

Advisors’ approach to both initial and ongoing philanthropic conversations has become more balanced between personal and technical topics. More advisors tend to initiate philanthropic conversations relying on personal topics (67%, up from 40% in 2018) more than technical ones (40%, down from 58% in 2018). Nearly half of advisors report ongoing discussions focus on technical and personal issues equally.

More Balanced Conversations:
Deepening the Discussion

HNW clients likewise report that their philanthropic conversations with advisors have become more balanced over time. Far fewer clients now say discussions focus primarily on personal topics (19%, down from 32% in 2018) or on technical issues (22%, down from 63% in 2018), with most (59%) saying the conversation centers equally on both.

HNW clients also rate their advisor’s ability to discuss personal values and charitable goals highly, with 95% saying their advisors are strong in this area (52% very strong, 43% somewhat strong). Despite advisors’ growing philanthropic expertise and more balanced conversations, only 61% of clients report being very satisfied with their philanthropic discussions, though this is up from 45% in 2018.

Knowing What Matters Most to Clients: Why They Give and Why They Don't

Advisors continue to rate HNW clients' top motivations for giving differently than clients do. Advisors most often cite being an inspiration to others (51%) and passion for a cause (47%). Meanwhile, HNW clients say they are primarily motivated by making an impact (53%) and because it feels good (50%). On the other hand, advisors and HNW clients rank the “desire to give back” more similarly (46% and 49% respectively).

Advisors continue to overestimate the role of tax benefits (40% vs. 21% of clients) in philanthropic decision-making.

↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Getting Organized: How Clients Structure Their Giving

Knowledge about giving vehicles continues to rise among both advisors and HNW clients. HNW clients’ use of structured giving vehicles has increased significantly, with 78% now using at least one vehicle (up from 43% in 2018), rising to 84% among HNW clients who discuss philanthropy with an advisor. More than half (51%) use donor-advised funds, followed by charitable trusts (49%), private foundations (48%), and giving circles or collaborative giving (28%).

Use of structured giving is strongly correlated with advisor involvement. Among clients who have philanthropic conversations with an advisor, 84% use one or more vehicles (up from 53% in 2018).

Learning More: What Advisors and Clients Want to Know

Most (85%) advisors plan to increase their knowledge about philanthropy. They are most interested in learning about impact investing (53%), integrating charitable goals into wealth plans (44%), and becoming more familiar with nonprofit organizations and community/social needs (43%).

HNW clients also express strong interest in learning, with 87% wanting to learn more about at least one topic in philanthropy, especially giving vehicles (51%), impact investing (38%), engaging the next generation (35%), and integrating charitable goals into broader wealth planning (34%).

↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Learning More: What Advisors and Clients Want to Know (continued)

A significant portion of HNW clients (75%, up from 40% in 2018) say they are more likely to choose an advisor who is knowledgeable about philanthropy, and 71% (up from 53% in 2018) say they would value philanthropic advice more if their advisors were philanthropic themselves.

Eighty-five percent of advisors intend to increase their philanthropic knowledge.

↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Good for Clients, Good for Business

Advisors increasingly recognize that discussing philanthropy is good for business, with 90% reporting these conversations benefit their practice (up from 78% in 2018). Most advisors also report that philanthropic discussions both deepen existing client relationships (88%, up from 74% in 2018) and help establish new ones (92%, up from 60% in 2018).

Advisors also see philanthropy as important to building relationships with clients' extended families (95%, up from 71% in 2018). Seventy-eight percent of HNWI clients say including extended family members in philanthropic conversations is important.

4. Role of the Advisor

Nearly all advisors now believe they have an obligation to discuss philanthropy with their clients, and clients overwhelmingly agree

A: Q13b: Do you consider it to be your obligation to discuss charitable giving or philanthropy with your clients?
C: Q23. Do you think your advisors have an ethical or professional responsibility to discuss charitable giving or philanthropy with you?

Most clients report advisors should have an important role in helping with their philanthropic efforts

More clients report advisors are playing that role than in 2018.

C: Q10. How important of a role should each of these advisors have in helping you with your charitable giving or philanthropy?
C: Q9. How important of a role would you say these advisors have had in helping you with your charitable giving or philanthropy?

↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Clients are discussing philanthropy with advisors more than with anybody else

Clients are also discussing philanthropy with a variety of other sources.

C: Q8. Have you ever discussed charitable giving or philanthropy with any of the following types of professionals or advisors you may use?
C: Q37. Other than any advisors you may have mentioned, please indicate if you have discussed charitable giving or philanthropy with any of the following?

↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Clients most often rely on spouses or partners for high-value philanthropic guidance

While the volume of high-value advice from philanthropic advisors has risen, the value of advice from other professional advisors has stayed nearly the same.

C: Q38. From whom or what organization have you received the most valuable information and direction to assist you in your charitable giving or philanthropy?

↑↓ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Clients who work with advisors on their philanthropic efforts are more likely to use structured giving vehicles

Clients are using structured vehicles for a larger percentage of their giving than in prior years.

C: Q4. When you make donations to charitable organizations, please indicate if you donate using any of the following types of giving vehicles.
C: Q5. How do you make the majority of your donations?

↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Almost half of advisors would choose to advise on parts of the philanthropic process rather than refer their clients elsewhere

Yet a growing share of clients report needs that exceed their advisors' expertise.

A: Q26. Where or to whom would you refer clients for charitable giving or philanthropy advice on each of the following topics?

An increasing number of clients report that their philanthropic needs exceed their advisors' knowledge and expertise

C: Q24. Have you ever needed or wanted charitable giving or philanthropy-related advice that your advisor was unable to provide directly for you (without bringing in another advisor)?
C: Q25. When/if your advisor was unable to directly provide the advice you needed or wanted, did they /would you want them to refer you to other individuals or bring in a specialist in this area?
Q: C26. Would you have wanted them to refer you to other individuals or bring in a specialist in this area?

↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Most advisors are inclined to refer clients to others when they cannot meet their clients’ philanthropic needs

More clients are finding they have needs that exceed their advisor’s capabilities, and advisors and clients agree that when needs exceed expertise, referrals are appropriate.

A: Q24. Have any of your clients needed charitable giving or philanthropy-related advice that exceeded the extent of your knowledge?
A: Q25. When/if your clients’ needs for charitable giving or philanthropy-related advice exceeded the extent of your knowledge, did/would you refer clients to other individuals or organizations who can help them with such advice or planning?

↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Reasons why advisors may hesitate to refer clients to other professionals

A: Q27. Why haven't you referred / wouldn't you refer your clients to others for charitable giving or philanthropy related advice?

5. Advisor Perceptions of Clients

Advisors' and clients' perceptions of the importance of philanthropic conversations have greatly increased

A: Q10. How important do your high-net-worth clients think it is that you discuss charitable giving or philanthropy with them?
C: Q22. How important is it to you to discuss charitable giving or philanthropy with your advisors?

↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Advisors overestimate certain client motivations and underestimate others

A: Q21. Thinking in general about your clients who engage in charitable giving or philanthropy, how important do you think each of the following is in their decision to give?
C: Q6. How important are each of the following in your decision to give?

* Significantly higher than 1 other reason 95% confidence interval
↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Advisors also continue to mistake the reasons why clients hesitate to give

A: Q22. Now thinking in general about your clients who hesitate or do not engage in charitable giving or philanthropy, how important do you think each of the following is in their hesitation or decision not to give?
C: Q7. Now thinking about reasons you may hesitate to give or to give more, how important is each of the following in causing you to hesitate?

Advisors report which clients are most interested in philanthropy

A: Q10a. In general, how interested in charitable giving and philanthropy are your high-net-worth clients that fall within each of the following general age categories?
A: Q10b. In your experience, how interested in charitable giving and philanthropy are your clients by each of the following characteristics?
A: Q10c. How interested in charitable giving and philanthropy are your clients by their level of liquid and/or investable assets?

Advisors expect external factors to influence client giving more than clients do

Clients differ from advisors about factors influencing their charitable giving.

A: Q10d. How, if at all, have each of the following issues impacted your clients' charitable giving?
C: Q31. How, if at all, have you changed your charitable giving or philanthropic work in response to any of the following?

Advisors report increases in clients' generational wealth transfer and planning

A: Q10e. Have you seen an increase in actual or intended generational wealth transfer by your clients in the past 2-3 years?

Advisors also report an increase in philanthropic provisions in wealth transfer plans

Advisors are much more aware of clients' wealth transfer plans now than in the past. Clients' inclusion of philanthropic provisions in wealth transfer plans has also increased.

A: Q23b. About what percent of your clients include instructions about charitable giving or philanthropy in their wealth transfer plans (including estate plans, wills, and other documents)?
A: Q23c. Would you say the percentage of your clients who include instructions about charitable giving in their wealth transfer plans is increasing, decreasing, or staying about the same?
C: Q41. Do your wealth transfer plans (including estate plans, wills, trusts and other documents) have instructions about charitable giving or philanthropy?
C: 41a. In your wealth transfer plans (including estate plans, wills, trusts, retirement plan beneficiary designations, and other documents), what percentage of your wealth do you intend to transfer to the following categories?

↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Advisors continue to overestimate the impact of tax policy changes on giving

Only one-third of clients expect they would increase their giving.

A: Q22d. Do you expect your clients to change their charitable giving as a result of recent changes in Federal tax policy?
C: Q33d. Do you expect to change your charitable giving as a result of recent changes in Federal tax policy?
↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Advisors also expect clients to increase their charitable giving if estate taxes and/or tax deductions for donations were eliminated

While clients agree, only about half report they would increase their giving in these instances, fewer than advisors anticipate.

A: Q23a. How do you think your clients would change their charitable giving or philanthropy if the following occurred?
C: Q34. How would you change your charitable giving or philanthropy if the following occurred?
↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Nearly all advisors report regularly discussing philanthropy with clients – consistent with clients’ expectations

A: Q3. Is it your practice to discuss charitable giving or philanthropy with your high-net-worth clients?
*From screener data, elevated base: n=472
C: Q19. Do you expect your advisors to talk to you about philanthropy?

↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

Most clients have discussed philanthropy with advisors and the proportion continues to grow

As more advisors make it their practice to have these discussions, clients are noticing the impact.

C: Q8. Have you ever discussed charitable giving or philanthropy with any of the following types of professionals or advisors you may use?

↑ Significantly higher than previous study 95% confidence interval

While nearly all advisors discuss philanthropy, fewer than half are doing so with most of their clients

There is room for improvement as all advisors have these discussions with at least some of their clients, but the proportion of clients they are having discussions with has not changed since 2018.

A: Q4. Approximately what percentage of your high-net-worth clients have you discussed charitable giving or philanthropy with? (These discussions may be initiated by the client or by you.)

Two-thirds of advisors report they usually initiate philanthropic discussions

Clients report that either they typically initiate the conversation, or that it's done equally by them and their advisors. However, over half of clients do not prefer one over the other.

A: Q5. When discussing charitable giving or philanthropy with your high-net-worth clients, do you tend to raise the topic or is it your practice to let the client raise the topic? Would you say the topic is...
C: Q20. When discussing charitable giving or philanthropy with your advisor(s), do you tend to raise the topic or does your advisor? Would you say the topic is...
