When Should I Choose An Organization Or My Self?

An organization is a legal entity that is organized and operated for public or social benefit. Grant requests from an organization are spent to further their social benefit work. They receive tax-exempt status from the federal government. Registering as an organization allows you to include information such as your EIN number. In addition to including general organization information, specific employee contact information can be included as well. Organizations generally require many different staff members to assist in writing, managing, and reporting on the applications and outcomes forms. Creating an organization profile allows for multiple members of your organization to collaborate in the GivingHub application portal.

An individual applicant (My Self) is a single person or family requesting grant funds for personal use. When applying as an individual you are not required to enter in an EIN number. All information entered will pertain just to you and you will be the key administrator of your GivingHub applicant account.

Organization	Myself
Has EIN Number	No EIN Number
Grant requests for social benefit work	Grant requests for individual need
General organization information including: Address, Phone Number, Email	Only individual information including: Personal Address, Phone Number, Address and Email
Multiple contacts	Single User
